

WORK-BASED LEARNING PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT COURSE

The Work-Based Learning Professional Development Course is a self-paced, asynchronous training for college faculty offered in Canvas. The curriculum is intended to increase awareness and understanding of the WBL continuum, equity in WBL, the MIS SG21 data point, and how to incorporate work-based learning into the classroom.

"What an eye-opener! My basic definition of WBL has not changed drastically but what has grown is the scope of activities that would be included within this definition. This course opened me up to new possibilities that I had never considered in my narrow thinking about WBL activities. Thank you for a wonderful learning experience!"- course participant

"In general I didn't focus much on preparing students for a career, but after taking this course I have some good ideas of how to do it without cutting out or neglecting required course content. This course gave me a lot of really useful ways to incorporate WBL into my classes, especially ways to emphasize and/or teach 21st century skills." - course participant
